—Columbu Times: The Primitive Baptist brethren of Knon church, Meriwether county, are in a bad way. They have quarreled almost to the point of fighting, over the question whether a member can join the Masons or Odd-Fellows and remain in church fellowship, and the result is likely to be a divided church.

—Macon Telegraph: On Saturday morning, between seven and eight o'clock, the corn house of Mr. H. Reynolds was discovered to be on fire, and was soon entirely consumed. The house contained eight hundred bushels of corn. There was no insuance on the building or its contents, and the loss will prove quite a serious one on Mr. Reynolds. —Augusta Constitutionalist: Last Sat-urday afternoon an old man named Wil-liam Green, about sixty-five years of age, committed suicide a short distance beyond the city limits, near the Central railroad, by taking two ounces of laudanum. To a party who saw him take the landanum. About ten o'clock Saturday night he was found lying in the old field near where he lived, having been exposed to the rain storm. He was picked up and carried to his bed and a physician sent for. The doctor, upon his arrival, found that the patient was too far gone for any remedies to do any good. Green lingered until 12 o'clock Sunday, when he died. Coroner Jones held an inquest over the body. The jury found that deceased came to his death by his own hand.

—Savannah News: Yesterday afternoon and last evening the neighborhood of East Broad, Broughton and Reynolds streets was the scene of great excitement, and the streets were filled with a crowd of some three or four hundred people, men, women and children, many of whom were provided and children, many of whom were provided with tin pans, cow bells, horns, trumpets and whistles, from which were evolved the most horrible and discordant noises, that could be heard several blocks away. Inquiry into the cause of this novel and unseemly demonstration on Sunday developed the information that Mr. John Formation and well-known resident, formerly a sergeant on the police force and a Miss Garraty had been married. mode of commemorating the event.
The disturbance became so great and so annoying that Mr. Foley proceeded to the barracks for the purpose of obtaining relief.
He was followed to the corner of South barracks for the purpose of obtaining relief. He was followed to the corner of South Broad and Habersham streets by a large crowd, which prudently remained on the sidewalk opposite the barracks, and, ascertaining what was the object of the visit, hastily retired as four policemen made their appearance, escorting Mr. Foley. This crowd was composed in the main of juveniles, who being fleet of foot, managed to escape the police. On reaching Mr. Foley's residence the sidewalks were found blocked with men and women, who seemed in perfect good humor, and yet apparently were determined on having the tin-pan serenade continu d. The latter, especially, it is stated, encouraged the juveniles, and many were active participants. After dark the disturbance increased, and the crowd swelling in numbers, reinforcements were sent for, and Lieutenant Howard and Sergeant Lingg, with four more men, started to the resone.

Lieutenant Howard and Sergeant Lingg, with four more men, started to the rescue. The sidewalks were cleared, and several boys with old tin pans and cow bells in their possession were arrested and carried to the barracks. The greatest excitement prevailed, and the police labored under great difficulty in suppressing the disturbance. Every now and then from some quarter would come the sound of a lively bell, the toot of a horn, or the clang of a tin pan, and when the policemen reached the spot the "musician" would be non est inventus and the same melody would be heard in another direction.

A MOUNTAIN OF MYSTERY.

One Explanation of the Cause of that

Georgia Mountain Sinking. Special to the Courier-Journal. GAINESVILLE, GA., August 23 .- The mys ery over the sinking mountain is still unsolved, unless the explanation given by Mr. M. Stephenson, an old and accomplished cientist, is the true one. He has lived in the gold-bearing section ever since the first white men came here. He says that he distinctly remembers that about forty years ago a shaft of a nine was run under the edge of this mountain and afterward abandoned. Later the water of the river which run near hy the water of the river, which ran near by, iltered through into this shaft, and washed evay all trace of it. It is a very rapid, swift mountain stream, and he supposes that it has gradually washed out the shaft, and enlarged the hole, until there was a vast chasm of a half mile long and fully as broad and half as deep. He thinks this washing continued until the support of about one-third of the mountain was eaten away, and it then tumbled into the chasm. It seems almost incredible that this could be true, and yet it is the only explanation offered. This, Mr. Stephenson holds, would account for the continued sinking of the broket mass, as he holds that the river is still eating it away. mountain stream, and

As fair as it may have seemed to a casual reader of the article in question, it is a most singular fact that the classes of goods used in the comparison of local rates, does not include cotton, bagging, ties, bac m or grain, and but daintily notices flour or fertilizers; important factors in making up the tonnage of southern railroad transportation.

Below I give a comparative statement as aniform in distances as I could find staniform in distances as I cou
